placed on the wall for the Whistler exhibition, and is in good condition. It is hardly probable that it will have to be removed.

At the end of the building toward Lowell there are two large studios, one on the west and one on the front. A separate entrance is provided for the studio and for the small studio in the front. There is a number of small rooms between these large studios, now used for dressing. There are several Wakeman attached.

The whole of the upper story of the building, which is the same size as the ground floor, except for the big hall, is taken up with studios, lighted in greater part by skylights.

The stage in the Copley Hall is large enough for a cast of sixty persons at a time. Its dimensions are 41 feet wide by 25 feet deep. There is a good supply of drops and stage machinery with a wide box entrance.

Alston Hall just back of the big hall is 60 feet by 40 feet. This hall is lighted from the back and has direct communication with the big hall though it can be shut off very easily. At the end of Alston Hall is a serving room and kitchen, well equipped with ranges, a big range and sinks.
