THE TECH

IN DECREPITUDE.

There are indeed dead things at the Institute but I do not mean dead.

The Society of Arts or any of its branches, including the Institute itself, is not the only institution that is rapidly dying. But the Institute, in particular, is not only dying, but it is dying in a very peculiar way. It is not dying because it is too old or because its members are too old. It is dying because it is too new or because its members are too young.

The Institute was founded as a society for the promotion of the arts and sciences. It was intended to be a place where young men could come together and learn from each other. But the Institute has never fulfilled this purpose. Instead, it has become a place where young men go to be with their friends and to have fun.

This is not to say that the Institute is not a good place. It is. It is just that it is not what it was intended to be. The Institute was supposed to be a place where young men could come together and learn from each other. But it has become a place where young men go to be with their friends and to have fun.

So the Institute is dying. Not because it is too old or because its members are too old. But because it is too new or because its members are too young.

EDWARD IDRATIS CHILL, 1910.

The sudden death of Edward Ignatius Cahill 1910 after a three weeks’ illness cut off the life of one of the most active and useful members of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. All who knew him in class and on the basketball team at Tech regret to lose such an earnest and hardworking student.

The funeral was held at 9 o’clock Saturday morning from his late residence 505 Lexington St., with services of one brief duration at the Sacred Heart Church, East Boston. Many friends and relatives with a number of members of the faculty were present at the ceremony. The Tech basketball team sent flowers.

Cahill was a basketball player of more than average ability playing two years on the Institute team as one of the leaders, preferably in the half position. He was a short, strongly built fellow, and a thorough athlete. He came to the Institute from East Boston High School where he starred on the basketball team for several years. His election to the captaincy of the Institute team showed that he was honored by his team mates. He was studying in Course II.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, Almighty God in his infinite wisdom and mercy has taken from us Edward Ignatius Cahill, a member of the class of 1910, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; be it

Resolved, That in his untimely death the Institute has lost a most loyal and faithful member, and in future, be it

Resolved, That the Class of 1910 extend their sympathy to the family and heartfelt sympathy in this, its hour of earthly absence.

TOM W. SAUL,
CURTIS C. WEBB,
JOHN R. HIGGINS,
ROBERT R. JONES, JR.,
For the Class of 1910.

WALDER DOANE 1911

Walter Doane 1911, after an illness of two weeks died at his home in East Boston April 30th, at 14:45, at his home in East Boston.

THOMAS J. HARRIS, ’10

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 in Arlington Street Church, the Rev. Mr. G. H. Ellis, D.D., officiating. The name of the late student was used as the subject of the sermon.

The Institute will hold a service of remembrance in connection with the class on Thursday afternoon at 3:30 in the meeting room.

For the Class of 1910.

COES & STODDER
FOR FOURTEEN YEARS
The Leading College Shoe House
14 SCHOOL STREET
BOSTON, MASS.

COES & STODDER
FOR FOURTEEN YEARS
The Leading College Shoe House
14 SCHOOL STREET
BOSTON, MASS.

The new shades for Spring arc now in stock.
Now is the best time for an early selection.
Some quality styles in fancy blue serge.s.

GLOVES
may be right and not be Fownes, but they can’t be Fownes and not be right.

GEO. H. ELLIS CO.
Printers
140, 373 CONGRESS STREET
BOSTON, MASS.

BENT & BUSH
15 SCHOOL ST., BOSTON, MASS.

BENT & BUSH
15 SCHOOL ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Telephone number: 805-2.

Now is the best time to have your lightweight clothes Made.

ARTHUR ONTHANK, TAILOR,
105 Summer Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

REFERENCES AMONG TECH MEN.