A REORGANIZATION MEDAL

Mismangement, discouragement and inharmonious relations seemed to have ruled the Tech show management this year if the many complaints set forth in another column are to be believed. In the past while only three complaints coming from persons who ought to know or those which have been carefully examined and corroborated have been given.

The first general insufficiency can be made against the previous general manager who seems not to have worked for the best interests of the show. The most striking instance against the at-titude of the several monitors of the management this year is in not getting together on a bad situation and working as a unit rather than as individuals.

The only department that seems to have come through unscathed is the stage. The old committee was made up of a few good men and the appro-priate was made to do an adequate amount of work and has proven his worth. The manager of this department seems to have found his work well in hand, and the best assistant was made to do a part important and useful.

But upon surveying the general situation and the other departments nothing but chaos, inefficient efforts, and produce working at cross purposes are to be found, this condition followed by the natural sequence, complaints upon complaints, this condition followed by the natural sequence, complaints upon complaints.

In approaching this condition, it would not be best to be too condemnatory. The general manager started with little or no experience, the head-PLETED businessman had little experience and was not old enough to be steady, and there was no advertising manager. The actual working manager in an attempt to relieve the business manager naturally allowed the letting, and made almost impossible harmonious feel-ings between the departments. But even under these unpropitious conditions.

For some time there has been a feeling that there was an opportunity to make the appointments to the store manage-ment, and the open position to work under the direction of the management, had been put in the magazines that would make the appointments to the store manage-ment, and the open position to work under the direction of the management, had been put in the magazines that would make the appointments.
