A WIRELESS SOCIETY
To The Editor of The Tech:

There are a large number of men now at the Institute who are more or less interested in wireless telegraphy and it is the aim of some of the more enthusiastic to try and form a "wireless" society. The advantages of such a club would be innumerable and considera-table help and information could be secured from the results obtained by the diffferent members.

The main object of the society would be, for progressive investigations and advancement of the science of radio-telegraphy and telephony; second, for the mutual advantage derived from the co-operation of its members in the work and experiences; third, for the discouraging of useless amateur inter-terferences with government, private, personal or commercial messages; fourth, for discouraging any attempts made by Congress or other legislative bodies to pass useless or injudicious legislation.
Infringing upon the rights of properly conducted experiments, or the translation of messages when not interfering or impeding with the government or other wireless companies business; fifth, for the immediate recognition of the so-called "interference signals," and encouraging all young wireless operators not in the above society to co-operate with its experiments as not to interfere upon the wave-tradition medium of prompt (radio) messages.

While Technique will abide by most things it is impossible for the Tech to publish the account kindly furnished by Mr. Logan, sub., Myers, in favor of the work of his society.
