TELEPHONE CLERKS ARE BEING EXAMINED FOR TUBERCULOSIS

At the close of the stock market to-day physicians of the Board of Health resumed their examination of the telephone clerks and employees of the Stock Exchange to ascertain whether any of them possessed traces of tuberculosis or other pulmonary diseases.

There are 300 telephone clerks employed by various stock firms and ten by the Exchange. They all have to use the phones during the day's business. As a precaution, the present examination has been ordered by the board of directors. The examination will continue every afternoon until the entire force has been examined.

Some time ago the directors gave orders to have all telephone transmitters covered with antiseptic gauze. Since then, one case of tuberculosis was brought to the attention of the directors and they thought the present examination advisable. The first began yesterday and the physicians found only one who had traces of the disease.

Secretary Ely of the Exchange says that any person found to be suffering from tuberculosis will be sent to sanatorium at the expense of the Exchange.

There are glass mouth-pieces on the market which can be bought for less money than MAXIM, but glass alone does not make an antiseptic mouth-piece. Glass being transparent will naturally be kept clean for obvious reasons.

MAXIM is the only real antiseptic mouth-piece because it contains a medicated airtight which not only kills any germs reaching but prevents these germs from getting into the diaphragm of the telephone which is the leading place of disease.

This is one of the many advantages MAXIM has over all telephone mouth-pieces.

MAXIM is an attractive addition to any telephone instrument either in home, office or Public Station.

It is made of the very best material throughout, and no expense has been spared to make MAXIM the very best telephone mouth-piece ever invented.
