COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of the Tech:

Why do the undergraduates persist in mistaking the Union as though it were their own personal property to be used without regard for the rights and comfort of others?

Is it not understood by the student body that the Union is there to use in company with the rest of us and that it is not belong to ones own than to another? Do they think that it is right to shove the floors and tables with waste paper and refuse which they are too lazy to throw in the receptacles provided for the purpose? Many might remember also that cuspidors are provided for the use of those who need them, too, said Dick. "Can't you see what you follow have to do with it, anyway," he said. "Why shouldn't the Freshmen go where they please to dinner? If they can get a good dinner and whatever they want to drink at the Crawford House, I think we have the right to throw a ing has been unearthed on Massachusetts ave., Cambridge, in excavating for the new Cambridge subway. If the wains uncovered did not belong to the first college structure, they probably were part of the house of Church, which was acquired by the college in 1641 and converted into a prietary. This house stood on the lot where the single building which now comprises Harvard College.

lege, the "Midas" of endowments, in Gilbert Murray's English translation, was produced under the auspices of the New Mawes Club of Boston.

MUSICAL CLUBS

Last evening the musical clubs gave a concert at Norumbega Hall, Auburn-dale, for the Auburndale Town Improvement Society. The program was the same as given last week in Welles-cy.

"THE HORNET'S NEST"

Drum-muddled and high-hatted, Cupid sat in the Cradle waiting until it should be time for the 6:20 to Wellesley, where he was to attend some sort of party. We had been discussing the Freshman Upper, and cupids had found him a place of the Freshman. "I don't see what them on their problems, but they don't attempt to tel us where we should go to get a glass o beer."

"Besides," said Billigan, "they can get a good dinner at the Union for less than a dollar. They give the Seniors a mighty good feed for seventy-five cents. And I'm sure that it wouldn't be best to limit Freshmen to light beer besides..."

The Union needs support, too, said Chet, who had been paying part of the dissipation until now. "We had a similar one some years ago. Our seniors, the Freshmen arranged for a big dinner down town, contrary to the Freshmen's rules. A meeting of the three upper classes was called, committees were appointed, and that night eighty-nine Freshmen went in the frog pool. Next day posters were up announcing that the place of the dinner had been changed to the colges Common.

"Well, anyway," said Dick, "I'll bet they don't sell more than two hundred tickets at a dollar." "I guess I'll have to be going," said Cupid, rather sheepishly. "It's nearly 6:20 now."
