1913 DINNER

Dr. Talbot then followed. After pitiful stories, he said that he wanted to be considered a fellow-student with everyone in the Union, urging the men to come to him as a helper. He urged the fellows, when deciding upon their career, not to keep the dollars and cents side of the question uppermost, but to choose that calling in which he will be the happiest. The best results will then follow.

Bursar Stand was the last speaker. He spoke on the Union, a subject very dear to him. He said that his remarks were in no way a criticism, but he desired to appeal to the men to reciprocate and stand by and support the Union. He showed by comparison the true need that the Union fills. He urged the class to live up to Tech standards and do credit to its Alma Mater. After a period of songs and choons the meeting disbanded.

BIG MASS MEETING

Mr. Sayrff stated that the freshman Dinner Committee did not in any way obtain the management of the Union as to a possible menu. It was only after all plans had been completed for the dinner down town that two of the men came around and asked a few questions as to what could have been done. Mr. Sayriff was of the opinion that the committee used very poor taste in the management. It has been found by a partial canvass of the faculty by two Tech reporters, that the general sentiment among the 1913 men was to have their class dinner at the Union, as in past years.

In closing, Mr. Sayriff wished to impress upon the students that the meals served in the Union of late have been entirely satisfactory to all men eating there regularly. The support and maintenance of the Union is with the students, and he urges all to give it a fair try and convince themselves as to its right to demand the students' support.

President Goodwin then put the resolutions and they were passed with a unanimous vote.

The resolutions passed and expressing the voice of the three upper classes are as follows:

"That the three upper classes disprove strongly of the action taken by the freshman class in giving up the Union as a place for holding their class dinners, in consideration of the fact that the Union was given to the students through the generosity of the friends of the Institute and alumni of the Institute as a place for such events; and that it is regarded as presumptuous in the extreme that a freshman class should set such a precedent, and be it further Resolved, That this action be taken as a precedent for the action of future classes."

Technology will be represented in all the local meets and the relay team will run in the meets held at Madison Square and Trey, New York.

"Boost" rather than "bash" would be a better motto for the communication writers.

Now that it's all over let's forget it.
