fully recovered. The following epitaph which he has placed on his wife's grave, reveals the tenderness of the man's nature:

Wendy summer sun,
Shade one here.
Warm southern wind,
Now mildly here.

The following glowing tribute was made by President Macalurin—"The best original feature of America is its humor. Whether rightly or not, Mark Twain was regarded as the best representative of this trait, it was peculiarly human in its appeal, and Mark Twain was consequently better and more widely beloved than any other American of his generation. Mark Twain is no more. But the fame of what he was and the influence of what he did will remain as a pleasant memory for many generations to come."

To wear a jacket which is the best of the season is a distinction of which the wearer may be justly proud. The necessity of wearing a well-fitted, good-looking coat is not only the pride of a gentleman, but the best investment he can make. A well-cut coat will last a lifetime; a poorly made one will become a disgrace in a year.
