COMMUNICATION.

Editor of The Tech:

Dear Sir,—The editorial which appeared in Thursday's Tech seems to me to be a little hasty in its condemnation of the Honor System. I have made a very careful investigation of its operation in some fifteen colleges, both through students and members of the faculty, and in no case has there been the slightest dissatisfaction. On the other hand, I know of no violation of the Honor System. The proctor system implies a doubt that the student has any will to cheat. If the University had enough money to give students their own examinations, the proctor system would fall upon some student committee, and the men composing this committee would by no means have a task light. Tech men should consider carefully whether they wish to accept this further burden in order to gain the questionable advantages of the "Honor" System.

Mr. Weid is to be commended for his unselfish and earnest effort to do some thing which he believes will benefit the institute. But it does not seem that the Honor System is necessary or would be for the good of Technology.
