THE TECH, BOSTON, MASS., OCTOBER, 22, 1910

The action of the Sophomore class in holding a meeting yesterday was novel, but the time had apparently come when such a meeting was necessary. After long delay, the college election ballots finally appeared, but were found to be practically useless. The names of several of the nominees were omitted, names were misspelled, and directions were wrongly given. Members of the class consequently called the meeting yesterday and took affairs into their own hands. The election ballots were destroyed and a number of names were suggested to be submitted to the class president for his selection of a new electoral committee. If, as conditions seem to indicate, the ballots are practically useless, the action of the Sophomores was timely. However, the ill-advised work of the electoral committee seems inexcusable, and the omission of names from the ballot decidedly questionable.

When are the nominations for 1912 class elections to open?

Professor Hugo Munsterberg, the well-known Harvard professor of psychology, and now Harvard exchange professor at the University of Berlin, has just opened his course of lectures in the Royal Library. He has been made an honorary director of the Albertina-Institute for this year. He will talk on a variety of subjects, including psychology, but he has practically never taken the subject of the Sophomores. The plan of the Sophomores was timely. However, the ill-advised work of the electoral committee seems inexcusable, and the omission of names from the ballot decidedly questionable.
