1913 Class Meeting

seems that some strenuous objections had been made by various men in the class against the appearance and constancy of the class ballot, which appeared yesterday, almost a week overdue. After the meeting was called to order by the secretary, Samuel Welford, who, in the absence of President Holmes, proposed a short speech to the assembled men. He pointed out that the ballots, as they were then voided, were absolutely useless. Many names were irrationally mis-spelled, making it impossible to get any reliable voting; many men were candidates for the same offices, and many names had been omitted from the ballot entirely. He therefore moved that these ballots be declared void. This was immediately seconded and the motion was carried unanimously. An extract was then read from the constitution showing that the original committee was not chosen legally. For there should have been five instead of three men on it. The question then arose as to how the election should be carried on. Many suggestions were made, and it was finally decided to act as follows: The secretary was instructed to write a letter to President Holmes, who appointed the original committee, saying that it was the united opinion of the class that this committee had acted extremely careless, and suggesting, moreover, that the three committee men be removed and that five of the seven men nominated by the committee be chosen to take their places. Seven names were chosen from the group from which the president will select five. No minutes were kept for any office was granted a place on this committee.

West Point has lately been in a state of open rebellion on account of the "silence" given Captain Rufus E. Frothingham. The Captain was with the 79th Pennsylvania in the battle of Gettysburg, and it is said that he was hopelessly missing at the time of the action.

MOORE'S
NON-LEAKABLE FOUNTAIN PEN
$2.50 And Up

A fountain pen that won't leak your secret. No driblets, no spatters, no nuts. You'll find it a most practical pen. Here's why: The pen works on air pressure, not water. When the cap is screwed on, the pen is a solid little unit. When not in use the pen can be cleaned. The new "silence" gives the original secretary a new lease of existence. Made in many colors. Five colors to choose from.

In this case multiply the age of the pen by its value. There is a theory that the longer a pen is used, the more it is worth.

The orders that have been received for the new model run from New York to California. The pen is a solid little unit, and is worth its value.
