A violent cyclone and snowstorm swept along the Italian coast yesterday, destroying many interesting historical places and resulting in no small loss of human life. The famous baths of Lucullus at Ischia, a mecca for all foreign tourists, are reported completely destroyed. In addition to the wind and rain, volcanic eruptions occurred in various places and large lava flows have also done much damage.

The unique high road from Sorrento to Amalfi, which is bordered by gardens and terraces, has been in places completely washed away. Land slides and washouts have also occurred in many of the famous spots of southern Italy.

Over one hundred persons have lost their lives, but fortunately among these are no Americans. Everyone is giving the cholerina zone a wide berth.

(Continued from page 1)

A baseball nine of the University of Chicago, at present playing a series of games with Keio and Waseda Universities of Tokio, Japan, has won two of games with Keio and one from Keio University. The team visited Japan on a challenge from Waseda University, and the games are said to have given much interest and enthusiasm on the part of the Japanese.

Two prizes have been awarded for two designs, out of a hundred and fifty which were submitted for a new seal for Cornell University. The committee will still discuss, however, the search for a more suitable design.

At the election of officers every member is present. The position of manager of the orchestra offers opportunity for some man to make a name for himself.