FRIDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1910.

Tech night at the Colonial Theatre is only one week away—the one night of a school year when all Tech students, undergraduate student body, publicize the glory or dearth of Field Day. To the Seniors it is in with dim recollection of bygone days; to the Sophomores and Freshmen who have yet to obtain the wisdom of an older mind it is an evening of rough-house, to throw all the conceit and streamers possible and to promote a general belief in the absurdity of demonstration.

In spite of the combined efforts of last year’s theatre committee to check the storm of flying horns and other devices, considerable damage was done to property in the Colonial Theatre. This certainly should not happen or be allowed to repeat itself.

When a thousand students rise up in their seats and strain to catch a shout from the stage, or the ticket taker at the door, or a glimpse of the curtain, there was no question in the minds of the members as to who should manage their club for this year. Before the election of officers the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and accepted. It was announced by the chairman that if everything turned out as is expected, the rifle team will hold a match with the university of the Commonwealth under the guidance of the executive officer, and H. L. Whilip, 1911, team captain, at the annual meeting of the Rifle Club yesterday afternoon, at 1 o’clock, in Room 23, Rogers Building. Every officer was elected unanimously, so there was no question in the minds of the members as to who should manage their club for this year.
