The president of a Western college, at the opening of the first Sunday service of the first term, read the number of the new students and remarked that it was the largest class the college had ever had. Directly afterwards he read the epistle of the day, as follows: "Lord how they have increased that trouble on it!

It was during the Math. Exam. The student sighed and sighed again. What would be the use to know that formulas, "how time doth fly" he articulated philosophically, "as he looked at his watch, under the desk. Then the Prof. jumped to his feet and cried: "Sir, I insist upon presenting that watch!" "Yes Sir, with pleasure," the other said, as he handed it over, and as the Prof. went out of the case, he read just one word: STUNG!

The Tech is considering a $35,000 joke contest for new and original jokes. Among the other prizes it might offer lodging for disabled jokes for what remains of their natural lives.

COMMUNICATION

The Editor of The Tech:

Dear Sir:

Because of several questions which have been asked me I wish to correct the impression of some fellows that the incidents mentioned in the communication of Prac. in Tuesday's issue were not actual cases. All incidents those mentioned were actual cases. Only five Tech Song Books can be found in the Union and those are in very poor condition.

Sincerely yours,
