of Ways and Means has prepared to make the continuation of State aid conditions on the raising of a million dollars. I have been trying the strength of the forces behind me. I hope not reached beyond the fact, but I have worked absolutely assiduously to make certain that they will contribute a very substantial proportion of the sum needed to purchase a suit, and State will take care of the rest. At the present time the State is in need. The generous friends of Mass are always from outside the State of Massachusetts. As an indication of their spirit of the contributions that they make to the prosperity of the State, it may be said that one of these alumni expressed himself in effect as follows:—"I am in connection with Massachusetts, and I have ties of friendship and loyalty to the State of Massachusetts. I believe that the management will continue to work steadily and to show the world that we are ready to meet the crisis and that we are ready to do our best to help the State in its difficulties." It is true that the world is not yet ready to appreciate the value of the work of the Institute, but the management is not discouraged.
