FINAL BANQUET OF ARCHITECTS

WILL BE HELD AT HOTEL THORNDIKE TO-NIGHT—DUQUENNE, OF HARVARD, SPEAKS

To-night, the Architectural Society will hold its last social affair of the year,—its big annual banquet. The banquet will be held at the Thordrike Hotel. It promises to be a most firing climax to the Society's successful season, a season replete with activity and social success.

The splendid list of speakers that the Society has secured for the event makes it certain that that part of the banquet will be well carried off. The principal speaker of the evening will be Mr. E. J. A. Duquenne, of Paris, who is now connected with the Harvard Architectural Department. He has secured his name as a speaker and guest.

At this banquet, the officers of the Society for next year will be installed. They are as follows:

President—Albert Harrison, 1912.
Vice-President—C. L. Edgerton, 1912.
Secretary: Sidney L. Day, 1912.
Treasurer: P. J. Horgan, 1912.

It is expected that the evening will be made as lively as possible with songs and general good spirit. Music will be supplied by the Musical Clubs.

he be liked to compare and to take as an illustration of counting the cost. One is called the "Conquerors" by a great French artist. It represents Ramesses, the Egyptian, Nebuchadnezzar, the renowned Babylonian king; Alexander, the conqueror of Persia and Caesar, the greatest soldier of antiquity, riding side by side, while behind them ride Charlemagne and Napoleon the Great, the greatest military geniuses of all times. As far back as the eye can reach we see a stern line of chariots. These represent the price paid when those conquerors rode to victory.

The other painting also called the "Conquerors" represents Moses, Antichrist, and the twelve Apostles around the cross. The men are clad in armor and most of them are the true conquerors.
