BUSINESS LAW EXAMS OF THE DAYS GONE BY.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of The Tech:

In direct opposition to the expressed opinion of the Advisory Council on Athletics that basketball has been abolished at Tech,let me give you the inside dope.

Basketball is being played at Tech despite the fact that the Advisory Council has said it is abolishing it.

The Council's decision to stop basketball was announced last week.

I am informed that the Council made its decision based on the belief that basketball is a non-scholastic sport and that it is not in the best interests of the students.

However, I can assure you that basketball is still being played at Tech.

I have spoken with several players and coaches who confirm that the Council's decision has not been implemented.

The Council's decision to stop basketball is not being enforced.

Please publish this information so that the truth can be known.

Sincerely,

[Name]

DARTMOUTH AND TECH TO FIGHT EVEN ODDS

DOPE SHOWS ADVANTAGE FOR EITHER TEAM

Dartmouth will lose on Some Little Thing

GREEN PICKED FOR FIRST

When Technology Should Come Strong For All The Seconds And Thirds.

According to all present indications, the game between Dartmouth and Tech on Saturday afternoon will parallel the victory of the Green over the Crimson last month.

The Green will have slightly better odds of perfection based on their recent form.

The Green, who won both games against the Engineers this season, have had a tough schedule.

They have played against some of the best teams in the country and have come out with their share of wins.

The Green's defense has been strong, holding the Engineers to low scores.

The Engineers, on the other hand, have a potent offense that can put up a good fight.

They have scored more points than the Green in their last two games.

The Green, however, have a solid defense that can hold the Engineers to a low score.

According to all present indications, the game will be close.

Dartmouth will lose on some little thing, such as a missed free throw or a turnover.

The Green, on the other hand, have a solid defense that can hold the Engineers to a low score.

According to all present indications, the game will be close.

Dartmouth will lose on some little thing, such as a missed free throw or a turnover.

The Green, on the other hand, have a solid defense that can hold the Engineers to a low score.

According to all present indications, the game will be close.

Dartmouth will lose on some little thing, such as a missed free throw or a turnover.