ARCHITECTS' BANQUET

place, but that he had never known him to be anything but a modest, helpful, manly man. In eulogizing him, he said that it is great to be modest; it is great to be a good architect; it is great to have made the Institute the foremost architectural school in the country, and to be sought after by all for advice; but it is far greater to have a big and overweening love for all mankind.

On account of his poor health Professor Desgradelle was unable to attend the banquet, and in his absence, Mr. Howard Walker expressed the deep regret of the Faculty of the architectural department on the departure of the man who had so long been their most earnest adviser and helpful associate. Mr. Walker then concluded with an ultimated expression of regret, and later a letter from Professor Chandler himself, which had nothing but praise for the work of Professor Chandler.

Representing the graduates, J. H. Parker sung and presented a song written by Stanley Parker, which contained words of earnest appreciation of what he had done for them.

President Harkness of the Technology Architectural Society then stated that the undergraduates would not at all miss Professor Chandler's kind and helpful advice, and as a little token of their respect, and esteem presented a loving cup.

President Chandler was by this time almost overcome and stated that he sought all of these gifts that were being given to some other person, for they were wholly unknown to him. It appeared, moreover, that only a start had been made as to the honors that were to come, for after Mr. A. W. Longfellow read an address praising him as a business man, statesman and chief, and Mr. Arthur G. Everett of the Boston Society of Architects had read a praise of praise and gratitude, Mr. Newman, president of the Boston Architectural Club, announced that he had been made an honorary member of the club, an honor that has only been given by this club six times before. President Longfellow then presented him with a watch, the gift of the Boston Society of Architects, and stated that a medal had been founded for fifth year students in the technology architectural department in the name of Francis W. Harkness.

Professor Chandler was pleased beyond all measure by these many honors, and admired again that he could not see how he deserved so much. He was most pleased with the watch, and added that it would mean much to him to know that the fifty years' men would now have this competitive prize.

The banquet was adjourned with a romance: "We are happy," by the Tech men present.

A small Deek, but full measure.

The Sophomore relay trials were very slow, and the Freshmen have a good chance to take this crown.

Tennis team is all picked, but matches don't seem to be all played off.

Batallion is bigger this year than ever before; two companies have nearly 100 men, and no spectators yet!

Considerable noise at the Freshman class meeting Thursday. Notice Hand and Pool?

Have you heard of the "Amen Corner," in the Helend House, New York, where all the "old cove" get together and talk as they would be expected to? A new innovation, look for the "Amen Corner" in the Union Dining Room.
