BASKETBALL TEAM
HAVE SNAPPY DRILL

Work Is Fast and Clean With Excellent Team Play.

About twenty men were on hand at the gym yesterday afternoon for basketball practice. The squad had to wait for the gymnasium class to finish their exercises, and consequently it did not get down to work until 5 o'clock. When it did start to work, however, there was plenty of snap and vim.

The usual shooting drill was gone through to limber up the men, after which three scrimmages were in order, with passing and shooting sandwiched in. The first scrimmage was exceedingly fast and clean, plenty of work was shown, and the men covered their opponents well. Moriarty was the star of the period, shooting a majority of the goals.

In the second scrimmage Capt. Shedd, Freedman and some of the older men were replaced by new candidates. This period showed the loss of the experienced players in the work. The less experienced men bunched together, getting few shots at the cage from the open floor. Everyone had plenty of wind and agility, so the game was fast and interesting.

The third period brought the old men back into play. This time there was less head work displayed. Frequent the men ran with the Princeton men, and had two hands on an opponent. This kind of work brought forth a few words of caution from Capt. Shedd, and the men were better until the end of practice.

In individual work Lawson is showing up well in both forward and center positions. Morse is a hard worker, keeping the fellow up against him going at a merry pace. Reed, a new man, is somewhat of a find if he keeps his present speed. Moriarty was the star of the game, shooting a majority of the goals.

Saturday it was decided not to send a team east. This has caused much comment as this team had a chance to win second place, and had two star men in Hannavan and Hainaburg. C. C. of N. Y. is entered, but is not dangerous.

Jones and Heron, the Cornell cracks, will probably take the first two places. Jones won last year and Heron in 1905. Withington of Harvard is about the next best, but he is not a team man, Copeland is far from behind him. McCordy and Murope of Penn, McCormick and Muroy of Dartmouth, Shedd of Tech, and Taber of Brown are picked to divide the next places.

Granting first place to Cornell, Harvard seems to have the best show for the next place. Tech has a slight chance to capture this place, but should win from Dartmouth, Syracuse and Penn. Brown and Yale should put up a close race, with Princeton following them. Although the previous performances would indicate this order of finish, a six-mile course and muddy ground may decide in favor of some of the slower ones.

Franz Marceau of Dartmouth is going to show his heels to Gene in the big race. He should come away up front at the finish.
