Below is the published provisional examination schedule as sent out to members of the Faculty for correction and additions. So far as possible this is the schedule that will be presented to the students, but all corrections and additions may be made by the professors on looking it over. Judging from past years, the number of changes will be small. The examination period extends over ten days, closing the 27th, only four days before the opening of the second term. The last examination through their exams on Saturday, the 20th, thus having one week's vacation. With two exceptions, the last second-year examinations occur also on Saturday, the exceptions being General Geology and Organic Chemistry, and not many men will take these exams. Upperclassmen will all be held until the final day.

The method of the presentation of the exams below is as follows: First, the subject, followed by the subject number in the catalogue, then the political weapon which the exam is given, and finally the hour. Room numbers, modify in regard to conflicts, etc., will be found on the Registrar's copies when they come out.
