HONORARY SOCIETY FOR JOURNALISTS

Chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon - Established at the Institute.

To encourage an interest in journalism at Technology and to elevate the character of the same is the purpose of a new society at the Institute, the establishment and purpose of which were outlined by its president, H. I. Peabody, 1912, at a general meeting of the news men and candidates for the staff of THE TECH held yesterday afternoon in the lower TECH office.

The new society is a branch of Pi Delta Epsilon, the national collegiate journalistic society, founded two years ago at Syracuse University. At the Institute only such Juniors and Seniors are eligible as have completed at least one year's work on THE TECH, and election to the society is based on the record made by each eligible man in his journalistic work. A year's work as correspondent for an outside paper is counted as half-year on THE TECH.

The journalistic society is one of but few at the Institute the election is honorary, and it is expected to prove an important factor in undergraduate life. Nationally, Pi Delta Epsilon stands for the same ideals in the journalistic field that the collegiate fraternity of Phi Beta Kappa does in scholarly lines.

The second-term candidates in THE TECH's news competition were told of the opportunities which were open to them if their work on THE TECH made them worthy of admittance to the new society.
