Owen Johnson offers
LARGE CASH PRIZE

Author of "Stover at Yale" wants opinion of social conditions.

College students as well as graduates will be interested in the competition started today by Owen Johnson, the author of "Stover at Yale," the story which has aroused so much discussion because of its frank treatment of conditions in American colleges and universities today.

Mr. Johnson is desiring of learning what the students themselves have to say about the social conditions of the college they attend, and to spur them on he offers two prizes, one of $150, and the other of $100, for the best papers on the subject. The first prize is open to undergraduates, while the second is limited to graduates.

The manuscripts should be submitted in typewritten form and signed by a nom de guerre, the real name being enclosed in a separate envelope. In any case where, for obvious reasons, a contributor does not desire to reveal his identity, his preferences will be considered, even in the event of his winning a prize. The competition will close June 2, and the announcement of the winners will be made in the Sunday Times of June 5.

Mr. Johnson holds strong views regarding the shortcomings of American universities. In fact, he goes so far as to charge that under their present curriculum they stifle thought by ignoring the vital problems of the day, such as the popular demand for United States Senators, the income tax, direct primaries, and similar questions of direct moment.

In all his comment on colleges Mr. Johnson has nothing but praise for athletics, which other critics have so often attacked.

DEBATE CLASS MEETS.

Third Year Option Discusses Censorship of Stage.

Yesterday afternoon, in 6 Lowell, the Argumentation and Debate class, a third year option in general studies, held a debate on the censorship of the stage, which was open to the Institute. There were a few non-members of the class present.

P. H. Achard, E. Hurst and E. M. Stanoe spoke in favor of the censorship being abolished, and F. H. Pendleton, T. R. Collins and E. C. Crocker were opposed. The announcement of the winning side will be made at the regular class on Saturday morning.

H. D. Peck was the presiding officer, and C. B. Patton, N. Clark and J. T. Pastene were the judges. The debate was well worked up, but the delivery of the speakers was disappointing, as it lacked force except in a few instances. Each speaker had ten minutes for his main speech and five minutes for rebuttal.

McLaughlin of Iven is one of the greatest athletes that has been seen at the field. He continued to try away at the pole vault, although he was scratched up badly because of falling in the hurdles.
