The Naval Architectural Society held a dinner for the Prom committee last night in order to raise funds. The dinner included about three hundred guests, and the total raised was over $4,000.00.

The Naval Architectural Society is one of the largest and most prestigious engineering societies in the country. It is headquartered in New York City and has a strong presence in engineering education and research. The society is known for its commitment to advancing the field of naval architecture and marine engineering.

The society has a long history of supporting education and research in naval architecture. It has helped to establish many schools and programs, and it has awarded numerous scholarships and grants to students and researchers. The society is also known for its role in advancing the field of naval architecture and marine engineering, and it has played a key role in the development of many important innovations in the field.

The Naval Architectural Society is a great example of the importance of supporting education and research in engineering. It is a testament to the value of investing in the future of the field and in the people who will be the leaders of the future. The society's contributions to the field of naval architecture and marine engineering have been significant, and its legacy will continue to be felt for many years to come.