Mr. R. E. Backenhus of the United States Navy to Be Speaker of Evening.

Tonight, at 6:30 o'clock, the Civil Engineering Society will hold its first dinner of the year in the Union. The officers of the society say the dinner will be a very interesting one, for they have secured as the speaker of the evening Mr. R. E. Backenhus, a graduate of the Institute.

Mr. Backenhus, who is at present a lieutenant in the United States Navy, has seen a good deal of service, and has just returned from the Philippine Islands to his present station at the Charleston Navy Yard. Backenhus tells those present at the dinner of his engineering experiences of his numerous experiences, he will also give an interesting description of the character and customs of some of the foreign nations through which he has traveled.

The officers of the society have arranged that the dinner will start at 7:00, so that the time taken to attend the dinner will not interfere with business hours. The dinner is not restricted to members of the society, but anyone who wishes to hear Mr. Backenhus speak is cordially invited to attend.

HOCKEY GAME.

(Continued from Page 1, Col. 4) pretty even on both sides during this period. The lineup was as follows:

HARVARD PLAY GIVEN.

(Continued from Page 1, Col. 5) "The chosen play, in its mixture of virtues and defects, of achieving promise and failure, was one with this performance if received. Mr. Carlin is a student playwright in the narrow sense of the word. Since he left the hands of the critics has_ been judged by Miss George and his name has丁 his work are not known in the managerial offices. For the commercial, simply, though not in the sinister sense of the word, Mr. Carlin obviously intended "The Voice of the People.""

The unfortunate shortcomings of Mr. Carlin's play are faults of procedure rather than faults of design or idea. The last thing that he has sought to do is to write a "literary" play. On the one side, his piece—two worded scene—"The Voice of the People.""

"The chosen play, in its mixture of virtues and defects, of achieving promise and failure, was one with this performance if received. Mr. Carlin is a student playwright in the narrow sense of the word. Since he left the hands of the critics has been judged by Miss George and his name has丁 his work are not known in the managerial offices. For the commercial, simply, though not in the sinister sense of the word, Mr. Carlin obviously intended "The Voice of the People.""

It is a tragedy quietly and without fuss."