ARCHITECTS HAVE A SPECIAL PROBLEM
Design For Chimney Due Last Night Results In Good Solutions

Nine o'clock last night was the time scheduled for the completion of the special sketch problem given to the Senior architects at eleven o'clock yesterday morning. The subject was a feature chimney for a monumental building, which proved to be an interesting piece of work when the students really warmed up to it. Now for a little sóliloquy! Tech men are proverbially busy, and the busiest of these are the architects. From early morning till late at night, cutting meal time and time usually taken for recreation by the students, these searchers after what the Greeks called beautiful, as well as the standard accepted by Tremont Row, are ever at work. Last night until the dismal hour of nine, there was a rush of pencil, the resounding thud of the wet-wash, and the agonizing toness of the pen-drawn lines on the drawing room on the third floor of Pierce Building.

In the corner room there was to be seen a scene of exemplary endeavor. "Kink" Eddie was there in his glory, making perfectly beautiful, fabulous nouveau Scandinavian chimney out of Danish Renaissance. Root, O'Brien, Richardson, Kendall and Gargon were working away as usual with excellent results, while Empe was doing his best to raise a roughhouse. "Abbie" was the assembled multitude how to draw a picture with taking advantage of Professor Lawrence's excellent elements. For the rest, there was nothing remarkable except that Lee was finishing a problem. And throughout the rest of the Departmental Drawing Rooms, there was a duplication of this inspiring drama.
