REV. KIRSOPP LAKE DELIVERS FIRST LECTURE
Gives A Very Interesting Talk On "The Growth Of Christianity."

Rev. Kirsopp Lake, D.D., Professor of Early Christian Literature in the University of Leyden, Holland, delivered the first of a series of five free public lectures on "The Growth of Christianity" yesterday afternoon in King's Chapel. The lectures are under the auspices of the Lowell Institute.

Rev. Lake spoke of the early Christian missionaries. He traced the movement that led to the division of Christians into beliefs and showed that the cause for the lack of coherence so noticeable to students of Bible history is chiefly the misuse of the terms by the missionaries to convey the ideas they wished to express. Two classes of Christians existed subsequent to the introduction of Christianity into the Roman Empire. First, those who looked forward to the catastrophic idea, a revolution followed by the establishment of a new system of society, hoped for the resurrection and the advent of a Messiah. This Messiah they expected to be a king, a ruler of the new society. Those who, on the other hand, accepted Jesus as the Messiah and who were satisfied to accept the sacramental idea, Rev. Lake placed in a separate class.

The type of religion that characterized the Greeks was a system of creeds leading to a satisfaction. The Greeks were desirous of obtaining merely a security that they would reach heaven. They were willing to accept the teachings even to the extent that they interfered with their previous beliefs. The Jews objected to the profoundness of the creeds. They wished to abide by the letter of the law, but were averse to accept Christianity in so far as it concerned their conduct and thoughts. They were willing to abide by outward things by means of which people obtain the strength they are looking for, and also hoped for the same immortality that they desire today.

1916 TUG-OF-WAR

The swimmers for the 1916 Tug-of-War Team will be at the Union at 4 P. M. today, Manager Sally especially requests that all men be present to get the swimmers at this time in order that the distribution may be effected with as little trouble as possible.

Oxford University has announced its intention of entering a four-mile relay team in the big relay games to be held at Penn next spring. Taber, formerly of Brown University, will probably run for Oxford.
