TALK ON PACKING

HOCKEY GAME

Although Tech has suffered more by graduation than has Harvard, it is able to present a good line-up, Captain MacLeod, Fletcher and Storke, veterans, are back. MacLeod and Fletcher are faster than ever. Storke is regaining the form which he had two years ago. He was unable to play last year because of an injury received in the Dartmouth game, and consequently he was handicapped at the beginning of the present season. Winton, at center, completes the forward line. He was captain of the Exeter hockey team last year, and is a former Wellesley High athlete. His speed on the ice and his smart work make him a dangerous man. Tech defense is wholly new, the three men being freshmen. But they come here with a good foundation in the game, having played on their prep-school teams. Cochrane is from Melrose, Gould from Newton and Lowengard from New York City.

The forward lines of the two teams are on a par with each other at this stage of the season, since neither one has much team work. Harvard will rely on its defense as it has been doing so far. Tech, on the other hand, has a new defense and must depend on her forwards for keeping the puck in Harvard's territory. Harvard's great advantage is the experience of the team as a whole, while the Tech team is an almost untainted combination. The following is a list of Tech's players:

1. Harvard
    - Cammoch, g
    - Willett, (Capt.), p
    - Cochrane (Capt.), g
    - Winton, w
    - Phillips, r
    - MacLeod, (Capt.)
    - Clark, c
    - Hopkins, b
    - Storke, b

Columbia holds the record for enrollment this year. She has 13,220 students, or more than twice the number of any other college. An army of 300 instructors is required to teach them.

In answering one of various questions asked at the conclusion of the talk, Mr. Shaw spoke of an experiment in sewage testing which he had tried in New York harbor. With the object of finding out just what life could flourish in various parts of the harbor, and men with field-glasses stationed on the decks of the Goddard, he set to work to detect the coloring wherever it occurred. The result, however, could not be reached for an at all dependable, since the sources of error were so many.
