FAMOUS RUSSIAN MINING ENGINEER AT TECH

ore dressing and treatment of copper and gold. Ore dressing is a new departement in Russia and yet it is a most important one, and American methods are as yet not used in it. The mines of the Lena district and Rachenskla, which resemble those of Alaska and the Yukon; while in the former and the operation along the edges of Mongolian deserts and those on the Turkestan border are parsimed by the mining belts lying under those where desert conditions also prevail.

Professor Tschetschott has been profes-for three years, and has seen the growth of mining education in his own county. It is true that the Kupremo Extrava school is one hundred and fifty years old with attention to technical instruction in its own colony, but mining is a very new addition. It is only a few years ago since the school was established at Nykolov, Siberia, where Professor Tove has made an excellent name for himself, and some of whose graduates have come to Boston, and more recently is the school at Kharkov. There is evidence now of a much wider appreciation of the need for technical instruction in the world, and at the moment there is projected a fine institution at Kacterinoslaw in South Russia, as the forerunner of still others.

Professor Tschetschott on finishing his present course will make a trip through the Northwest, to the Michigan, Canada and Alaska, getting to St. Petersburg in time to take up his three months of lectures in the autumn, after which he is to return to Tech for a second special course, following which there will be a visit to mining works in other parts of the country, including Colorado and New Mexico. In testimony of the value placed by the individuids on instruction and observation in this county it is fair to say that the travel will cost this student something like five thousand dollars more than his allowance from the Government, but he feels that his projected plans will place him at the head of his profession in his own country.
