REV. A. W. VERNON
Speaks in Union

Gladstone and Martin Luther
Illustrative of Christian Leaders.

Yesterday noon the Rev. A. W. Vernon, pastor of the Harvard Congregational Church of Brookline, spoke in the Union on the subject, "One Important Proof of Christianity." He said in introducing his subject that Christianity did not need proof, because it helps each individual as well as the world in general; but it is well to consider what influenced the writer to the footsteps when he told them to "Remember them who lived before you ... and imitate their faith."

A proof is suggested in the lives and careers of three great Christians who lived in widely different times—Gladstone, Martin Luther, and Jesus of Nazareth. By considering the issues of their lives it may be possible to find some tangible element which is essential to Christianity.

Gladstone entered Parliament to help the Church. For ten years he remained there, practically unnoticed; but when he ultimately gained the position of Prime Minister, he dominated politics for twenty-five years. Ho was not a register of public feeling, but a measurer and leader of it; he continued unwaveringly in what he thought to be right, and, when he died, was mourned by all nations. It would seem to be a good thing to imitate his faith.

Take the case of Luther. Here was a man who had more to do with the upbuilding of the masses than any one in modern times. At twenty he began to study the Bible, and, after completing his course at a convent, he came to the conclusion that there is no peace in the hearts of women because of goodness. He proceeded to proclaim his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope. Before he died, his faith had touched his doctrines and defy the Pope.
