I

It was hinted that the book would be in the book is because those men known that their only reason for ing their proofs and so the work of close friend whose picture they es-ned to return to doubt that the supply will be

Senior Portfolios

Great Rush for Sign-Up Slips—Limited Number of Books Being Printed.

The sign-up slips for the 1914 Senior Portfolio have now been out for three days and the passionate longing that the Seniors have evinced to part with their money is surprising. One man who had been entrusted with a sign-up book Monday night came in to the Committee Tuesday morning with twenty dollars and with tears in his eyes begged for another book in order that he might satisfy the demands of his friends, who, hearing that the number of books to be published would not be sufficient, were pleasing with him to sign them up at once. This is the attitude with almost the entire class. Of course there are a few of those who, to revive an expression which probably only the Senators have heard, are “theoretically dead,” but they are in the minority.

Only two hundred and twenty-five copies will be ordered by the Portfolio Committee, and so it is reason to doubt that the supply will be sufficient to meet with the demands of the class. More copies may be printed, but those who delay in signing up will probably have to wait until after graduation to get their books.

The Committee has made final argenements for placing the contract with the institute. Giving us a trial we are, and son to doubt that the supply will be.

The sign-up slips for the 1914 Senior Portfolio have now been out for three days and the passionate longing that the Seniors have evinced to part with their money is surprising. One man who had been entrusted with a sign-up book Monday night came in to the Committee Tuesday morning with twenty dollars and with tears in his eyes begged for another book in order that he might satisfy the demands of his friends, who, hearing that the number of books to be published would not be sufficient, were pleasing with him to sign them up at once. This is the attitude with almost the entire class. Of course there are a few of those who, to revive an expression which probably only the Senators have heard, are “theoretically dead,” but they are in the minority.

Only two hundred and twenty-five copies will be ordered by the Portfolio Committee, and so it is reason to doubt that the supply will be sufficient to meet with the demands of the class. More copies may be printed, but those who delay in signing up will probably have to wait until after graduation to get their books.

The Committee has made final ar-
genements for placing the contract with the institute. Giving us a trial we are, and son to doubt that the supply will be.

The sign-up slips for the 1914 Senior Portfolio have now been out for three days and the passionate longing that the Seniors have evinced to part with their money is surprising. One man who had been entrusted with a sign-up book Monday night came in to the Committee Tuesday morning with twenty dollars and with tears in his eyes begged for another book in order that he might satisfy the demands of his friends, who, hearing that the number of books to be published would not be sufficient, were pleasing with him to sign them up at once. This is the attitude with almost the entire class. Of course there are a few of those who, to revive an expression which probably only the Senators have heard, are “theoretically dead,” but they are in the minority.

Only two hundred and twenty-five copies will be ordered by the Portfolio Committee, and so it is reason to doubt that the supply will be sufficient to meet with the demands of the class. More copies may be printed, but those who delay in signing up will probably have to wait until after graduation to get their books.

The Committee has made final ar-
genements for placing the contract with the institute. Giving us a trial we are, and son to doubt that the supply will be.

The sign-up slips for the 1914 Senior Portfolio have now been out for three days and the passionate longing that the Seniors have evinced to part with their money is surprising. One man who had been entrusted with a sign-up book Monday night came in to the Committee Tuesday morning with twenty dollars and with tears in his eyes begged for another book in order that he might satisfy the demands of his friends, who, hearing that the number of books to be published would not be sufficient, were pleasing with him to sign them up at once. This is the attitude with almost the entire class. Of course there are a few of those who, to revive an expression which probably only the Senators have heard, are “theoretically dead,” but they are in the minority.

Only two hundred and twenty-five copies will be ordered by the Portfolio Committee, and so it is reason to doubt that the supply will be sufficient to meet with the demands of the class. More copies may be printed, but those who delay in signing up will probably have to wait until after graduation to get their books.

The Committee has made final ar-
genements for placing the contract with the institute. Giving us a trial we are, and son to doubt that the supply will be.

The sign-up slips for the 1914 Senior Portfolio have now been out for three days and the passionate longing that the Seniors have evinced to part with their money is surprising. One man who had been entrusted with a sign-up book Monday night came in to the Committee Tuesday morning with twenty dollars and with tears in his eyes begged for another book in order that he might satisfy the demands of his friends, who, hearing that the number of books to be published would not be sufficient, were pleasing with him to sign them up at once. This is the attitude with almost the entire class. Of course there are a few of those who, to revive an expression which probably only the Senators have heard, are “theoretically dead,” but they are in the minority.

Only two hundred and twenty-five copies will be ordered by the Portfolio Committee, and so it is reason to doubt that the supply will be sufficient to meet with the demands of the class. More copies may be printed, but those who delay in signing up will probably have to wait until after graduation to get their books.

The Committee has made final ar-
genements for placing the contract with the institute. Giving us a trial we are, and son to doubt that the supply will be.

The sign-up slips for the 1914 Senior Portfolio have now been out for three days and the passionate longing that the Seniors have evinced to part with their money is surprising. One man who had been entrusted with a sign-up book Monday night came in to the Committee Tuesday morning with twenty dollars and with tears in his eyes begged for another book in order that he might satisfy the demands of his friends, who, hearing that the number of books to be published would not be sufficient, were pleasing with him to sign them up at once. This is the attitude with almost the entire class. Of course there are a few of those who, to revive an expression which probably only the Senators have heard, are “theoretically dead,” but they are in the minority.

Only two hundred and twenty-five copies will be ordered by the Portfolio Committee, and so it is reason to doubt that the supply will be sufficient to meet with the demands of the class. More copies may be printed, but those who delay in signing up will probably have to wait until after graduation to get their books.

The Committee has made final argenements for placing the contract with the institute. Giving us a trial we are, and son to doubt that the supply will be.