One source of pleasure and profit which many come a long way to enjoy, yet which most Tech men neglected because it lies at their very doors, is the lecture courses given by the Lowell Institute. The present series, given by Professor Bertrand Russell, of Cambridge University in England, presents some particularly novel and substantial ideas for such students who belong to the Prohibition Clubs. The club is promoting scientific research upon the different phases of the liquor question.

The University of Florida has joined the array. The faculty has decided to give special credit to students who belong to the Prohibition Clubs. The club is promoting scientifc research upon the different phases of the liquor question.

For the first time since Stanford University was founded the trustees, last Saturday issued a financial statement, which showed that the wealth of the institution amounts to twenty-four million dollars. This includes the original endowment for general maintenance, the capital increases since then, and other endowments and special funds, but it does not include the value of campus lands, buildings, equipment, etc., since they are not revenue producers. The income last year was over one million four hundred thousand, which is small compared to that of other universities of the east. This fact is undoubtedly due to the fact that tuition is free to residents of California and only thirty dollars a year to non-residents.

There are fifty-five L men in college at Lehigh. Out of these fifteen letter were awarded in football, nine in baseball, eight in lacrosse, six in basketball, ten in track, two in wrestling and one in gymnastics.
