THE TECH, BOSTON, MASS., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1914.

IN CHARGE OF THIS ISSUE

Editor, H. E. Lobdell, ’17
Assistant, B. N. Stimets, ’16.

The time has come when each underclassman should decide the question, “What shall I do to help my class win Field Day?” Many will deduce this question with some such excuse as “I’m too busy,” “I’m not very strong,” or “What good will it do me?” Such individuals forget that one-third of the time they waste daily would suffice for that no one knows his own power unless he tries; and that the most successful selfishness is un-subsistence.

To come down to plain facts, it is constantly being proved that what you get out of your business, your social relations, or your school, is proportional to what you put into it. The men to whom Tech has given financial success, power, fame, and above all true enjoyment of life, are the men who have given their best to Tech not only in the classroom, but in as many different ways as they could find or create opportunity.
