To the Editor of The Tech:

Last Wednesday afternoon, I was one of the two men sent over to the Armory to sell "Niemand Zu Hauser" tickets to the freshmen at drill. Much to my surprise, the attitude of all those to whom we tried to sell tickets was anything but loyal to Institute activities. I don't believe that there were over forty men who had already bought their tickets and not over twenty who signaled any interest in the subject. On the contrary, the majority loudly declaring "they weren't going," seemed proud of the fact.

Such a universal feeling among a class that everybody thought at the start of the year was going to be "alive," is to be regretted. Maybe the freshmen do not realize that this year the burden of the financial support of all Institute activities is upon the undergraduates themselves. "Niemand Zu Hauser" was planned and is being run in order to get this support. The money derived will be immediately turned over to the Institute Committee and used by that body for the different activities that are in need of financial support.

The freshmen, for outnumber any other class at the Institute. From them, therefore, should come the largest support in numbers at "Niemand Zu Hauser." If they persist in their present non-participating attitude, their representation will be below each of the other classes, and it is up to the members of the class themselves. If they don't rally to the support of "Niemand Zu Hauser" today, and if a large majority do not buy tickets, it means that the true Technology spirit has not been infused into the class of 1918.

E. B. Society Visits Mammoth Plant at Lynn.

On last Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon, members of the Electrical Engineering Society visited the extensive plant of the General Electric Company at West Lynn. The parties arrived at three o'clock, and were conducted through various departments, the entire inspection occupying three hours. Some idea of the size of the plant may be gathered from the fact that 6000 machine tools in use, 5200 electric motors, 2200 arc lamps, and 135 travelling cranes. The capacity of the power plant is 5060 k.w. The parties made a comprehensive tour of the buildings, beginning at the main gate, on Western Avenue, visiting the machine shop, forge, and later the winding rooms, and testing and assembling departments, as well as the special tools for turning out installations, and multi-spindle drills for drilling motor frames. The trip ended at 6 P. M., at the Federal Street gate.
