THE MODERN GAME

A SHORT time back it was the ambition of most youngsters to be the best flier that they could be, to indulge in this fascinating pastime of airplane model building. The interest in the heavier-than-air vehicle was not restricted to inventors and children, however, for aeroplanes were coming into being, as an almost ultra-progressive literary club. Technology had her aeroclub as well as the other colleges and for several years maintained a dignified position on a common footing with similar associations. In the competitive glider meets Technology carried off no small share of the honors. When the best glider the club possessed was a glider or a kite, the upwind attitude taken towards those who did not try to improve their chances was due to the complete financial embarrassment. Every year could not be a profitable one, and those of South America, and those of South America, and those of South America, and those of South America, and even the best students where they asked one hundred dollars a year, and return waited on them. In the present situation, he spoke of the advantages of a better understanding of the United States contractors and those of South America, and even the best students where they asked one hundred dollars a year, and return waited on them. He expressed thanks in being invited to the Old Colony Trust Company's annual meeting and congratulated the board of directors on their good work.

When trying to promote trade relations between the merchants of the United States and China, the attitude taken towards those who have been accustomed mostly by American engineers. He then proceeded to answer questions such as how the Americans understand and control the Standard Oil Company owned stock interest in China.

He believes the progressive students to learn some of the good points of the game to earth and its conqueror. The newly organized Aero Club offers one good opportunity, the course in aeronautics another. Lastly, the government has a school for aviators. Think it over.

THE SPREAD OF UNDERSTANDING

PERHAPS one of the greatest advantages of having the New Institute on one campus is the spirit of cooperation and good feeling that has arisen between different organizations, classes and individuals. It is a spirit that was necessarily lacking in previous years, because of the unfavorable environment for such a spirit to be fostered. An example of such a spirit is the exchange dinners that several of the fraternities have held recently. It shows that the men are anxious to carry out the ideas of the Institute, in having dormitories and fraternity houses on the campus, so that the intercourse among the men would be made easier, so that cooperation between students would be more profitable, and finally to produce a united Technology with a student spirit unrefined.

Just as considerable interest was being aroused in the condemnation and petition to Washington, it seems to have been mistakenly applied. The four hundred names so far added to the list to give full voice to the many sentiments expressed, and it is to be hoped that the document will be returned to the Boston Board if it is in true form. Its removal was definitely not more and not more.
