ARCHITECTS TO TAKE TRIP AND HOLD ANNUAL DINNER SUNDAY

The members of the Architectural Society will make a trip to Zwick's Flats at Cambridge, a site which is just outside of Boston. Afterwards they will return to Boston where they will hold their annual dinner at the Belhaven. The managing committee has invited several members of the Faculty to speak, and it is neither difficultly known just who the speakers will be.

AERO CUBS TRIP

(Continued from page 3) an ever so slight touch of bravery. As planned they were to have had a span of over one hundred and thirty miles first, but this was found to be impractical, so they were reduced to thirty-five miles first. They are equipped with four two-horsepower engines in a single row, of which two are at the stern and two at the bow, and a forty horsepower motor to drive a radiating propeller at the stern. The party then went to the building in which the models were assembled. In the building there was a window machine, that is, one in which no gas was used, the idea being to cut down wind resistance as much as possible. From this building the men went to another in which the models were finished. Here they saw a large test machine which had only one section. The wind used in the Burgess machines is the first of its type. The machine was just the next phase to be visited. The Burgess company are planning to build a large machine next where they overturn the motors. The motors used in the Burgess-Owens machines are the Curtiss Type 0XV's and the Stuart Type Number 5. Both are of the rigid elliptical type, the former developing 50 horsepower at 1800 R.P.M., the latter putting out 150 at its maximum speed of 2000 R.P.M.

The Burgess people build several types of machines, the most important of which are the seaplane, the hydroplane, the surface and the trailer, and then a special type called the Navy Seaplane. The hydroplanes and the land machines are tractors and the others are of the pusher type, that is, the motors are in front as in the first type. All of these machines are larger in size and will carry a load varying from four hundred to one thousand pounds, depending on the size of the machine.
