WASHINGTON TO BE HISTORICAL CENTER

Plan Community Club For College Professors and Students Who Want to Delve Among Antiquities

BOARD WILL BE CHEAP

While the country is deep in a war of nerve, college professors all over the country are planning for the knowledge of the affairs of the past. The men who are responsible for the conduct of their students are in earnest in trying to make these students into historians and to make their instruction as interesting as possible. And if this is not the case, it is because they have neglected to equip themselves with the necessary qualifications to do so.

Professor Charles H. Nott, who has been teaching for many years in the Department ofHistory at Harvard, has been making a study of the departments of history in the various colleges. He has discovered that the courses in history are not very successful, in part because they are not taught by men who have had the necessary training for the work. He has found that the courses are taught by men who have had little or no training in history, and that the courses are not very successful, in part because they are not taught by men who have had the necessary training for the work.

The American Historical Society, on the other hand, is making many advances in the direction of making the courses in history more successful, in part because it is teaching them by men who have had the necessary training for the work. The American Historical Society is teaching history by men who have had the necessary training for the work, and it is making many advances in the direction of making the courses in history more successful, in part because it is teaching them by men who have had the necessary training for the work.

The American Historical Society, on the other hand, is making many advances in the direction of making the courses in history more successful, in part because it is teaching them by men who have had the necessary training for the work. The American Historical Society is teaching history by men who have had the necessary training for the work, and it is making many advances in the direction of making the courses in history more successful, in part because it is teaching them by men who have had the necessary training for the work.