TECHNOLOGY CLUB OF PARIS OPENS FOR MEN IN SERVICE ABROAD

Van Remssellinger, '98 Ready to Accommodate Institute Men in Homelike Quarters at 7 Rue Anatole de La Forge, Paris

WILL COMBINE WITH PAN-COLLEGIAL UNION

"T HE Technology Club of Paris has been started for the benefit primarily of Institute men in service abroad during the war. It will be open for all Technology men, European or engaged in civil or military life. While the French soldier is able to return home during his furlough, the American soldier is unable to enjoy the privilege, and the club aims to give to Institute men an American club, as conducted as to be found in the States under the circumstances." This is the introduction to bulletin number one, issued by Van Remssellinger, who has started the Technology Club of Paris, in a note of the bulletins, published each week, is a prospectus of the club and its purposes. Copies of this bulletin are being sent to the training camps abroad, while pocket-book-size reprints are on presses in America and will be distributed through military organizations.

The club is under the charge of the late President of the Institute, Vice-Dean F. F. Bostwick, and is started and maintained under the direction of the Institute's executive council, with the approval of the governing board. The club is situated at 7 Rue Anatole de La Forge, and will provide everything necessary for comfort and amusement, with the following features:

In the first place, there is the presence of the Frenchman, the Frenchwoman, and the French soldier. These are the elements of the club. There is also the presence of the French Institute, the French technical school, and the French army. These are the organizations that will make the club successful. And finally, there is the presence of the French Institute, the French technical school, and the French army. These are the organizations that will make the club successful.

In conclusion, it is necessary to mention that the Technology Club of Paris is a most excellent club, and that it will be a great success. It is a club that will be enjoyed by all Institute men, and it will be a source of comfort and enjoyment to them.
