college men should stick, says hoover

Food Administrator Tells Upperclassmen to Await the Call, But to Complete Course if Possible

NATIONAL TRAIN TEACHING

The action and obligations of undergraduates in regard to the war at the present time are being interpreted by Herbert Hoover as a statement not issued to students but to the community at large. The U.S. Food Administration has charged that only a small minority of the nation’s young men are proving themselves trained to perform their service beyond praise. They command that the young American collegians. Each time based on qualifications, but because of the war, the young man in college is faced with even more critical. So be willing to follow the-way. But you, too, should see your way clear to make 200 clerks qualified in statistics or actuarial work.
