MISS A. I. DARLING
Typewriting—Multigraphing Wipe errors in scientific work of all kinds, and also provide for the comfort of students taken directly at MISCELLANEOUS WORK and Loose Leaf Devices
51-61 Franklin St.

The TECH
Wednesday, February 27, 1918

America, Awake!

It is time for us of America to realize that in the World War, two alternative domains lie ahead, and only two. The one is that of peace. The other is that of war.

We had thought that Germany had apologized for her greater injustice in this, and by a part of the world, in spiritually, we had hoped that the powers that were at war had learned a lesson of the futility of war.

It is now time for us to realize that the forces of world power that are at war are not at war for the sake of peace; they are at war for the sake of power.

And so it must be that we see that, even as we now see that she will never be able to make good her promises to the Allied powers.

For if all nations of the world were able to live in peace and amity, then there could be no question of war.

But if we are not able to live in peace and amity, then we must prepare ourselves for war.

For it is in war that we can assert our rights and our liberties. In war we can assert our national independence.

And so it is in war that we must prepare ourselves to fight for our national independence. In war we must prepare ourselves to fight for our national independence.

The time has come for us to realize that we must be willing to fight for our national independence. In war we must
prepare ourselves to fight for our
national independence.

The time has come for us to
realize that we must be willing
to fight for our national
independence. In war we must
prepare ourselves to fight for our
national independence.

The time has come for us to
realize that we must be willing
to fight for our national
independence. In war we must
prepare ourselves to fight for our
national independence.

The time has come for us to
realize that we must be willing
to fight for our national
independence. In war we must
prepare ourselves to fight for our national independence.