JOSEPH WARREN HOMER, JR.

Blown eighty miles south, landing for a few minutes on the north coast of France. He steered home by compass, landing within two miles of his destination. In August he was transferred from East bourne, England, to a station near Edinburgh, Scotland, and was made third officer of one of the larger airships, a "Rigil" about 500 feet long, and since then had been flying out over the North Sea. Having established a reputation as an all-round naval airship pilot, he was last month sent to London Headquarters where, according to a letter to his father written October 25, he was "taking a course in structure and design of airships," and hoping "to get on to the Staff and feeling "fit as a king."

He was the only son of Joseph Warren and Constance Homer of Brookline. He leaves his parents, two sisters, Mrs. Edwin S.
Parker of Jamaica Plain, and Mrs. Richard W. Crocker of Brookline, and hosts of loving friends.

He held his course high o'er the restless deep,
His boon companion was the morning star
He watched, and now the stars his vigils keep-His flight is Rigilied to where all heroes are.

would drop some Murads
