The TECH

COMMUNICATION DISCUSSES COMING PROBLEM OF INSTITUTE

The following discussion, meaning the problems caused by the exodus of many students from the Institute, has just been received by THE TECH.

"It is with pride that President Robert B. Goddard announces to the members of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology that he can now, after the hard months of planning and preparation, announce the opening of the new building for the study of aeronautical engineering, which is the largest in the country, but at the same time, he is glad to report that the old buildings, the areas of the campus which connect the two parts of the Institute, have been altered and modernized so that there is a seamless transition from one part of the campus to the other.

There is a question about the feasibility of the plans, and there have been doubts about the cost, but in the end, the Institute Committee has decided that the existing buildings are quite adequate for the new and larger student body.

The Institute has been able to continue its activities and to maintain its high standards of education. This is a remarkable achievement, and it is a tribute to the ingenuity and determination of the Institute Committee.

The new building will be a great asset to the Institute, and it is a step forward in the direction of modernization.

The Institute is one for continuing education, and it has advanced the country's military education, which is of great importance for the future of the country.

The Institute is proud of its history, and it is proud of its future. The Institute is proud of its past, and it is proud of its present.

The Institute is proud of its students, and it is proud of its alumni. The Institute is proud of its faculty, and it is proud of its staff.

The Institute is proud of its traditions, and it is proud of its accomplishments.

The Institute is proud of its achievements, and it is proud of its future.

The Institute is proud of its students, and it is proud of its alumni.

The Institute is proud of its traditions, and it is proud of its accomplishments.

The Institute is proud of its achievements, and it is proud of its future.