George Eastman Gives Views on Education, Labor Unrest and Present Industrial Problems

George Eastman was asked several important labor and educational questions during the jubilee dinner of the Institute of Technology.

The following is a summary of those questions and his responses:

Q: What do you think about the labor movement in America?

A: "Because I had to" was the reason George Eastman gave when asked about his views on labor unrest.

Q: What do you think about the quality of education in American colleges?

A: "The reason my name was kept a secret was because I desired it. I wanted to escape the personal notoriety that I anticipated from the disclosure of the secret that he attend the jubilee dinner last year."

Q: What do you think about the future of American industry?

A: "I have no fear of a coming chaos. I have no fear of a coming chaos. I have no fear of a coming chaos. I have no fear of a coming chaos."

Q: What do you think about the importance of education?

A: "Because I had to" was the reason George Eastman gave when asked about the importance of education.

Q: What do you think about the future of American business?

A: "The same business that a man could go through in a day in my time is the same business that a man could go through..."

Q: What do you think about the future of American technology?

A: "The same business that a man could go through in a day in my time is the same business that a man could go through..."

Q: What do you think about the future of American art?

A: "The same business that a man could go through in a day in my time is the same business that a man could go through..."

Q: What do you think about the future of American science?

A: "The same business that a man could go through in a day in my time is the same business that a man could go through..."