GIVE ADVANCED FIGURES.

The value of the total mineral production of Alaska in 1919 was approximately $17,000,000, and about $22,000,000 in 1920. This figure is an indication of the increase in the output of precious metals. The production of gold during 1920, however, was less than in 1919, chiefly because of the decrease in the value of the gold produced. The value of the mineral production in Alaska in 1919 and 1920, as follows:

1919: $17,000,000
1920: $22,000,000

The most significant changes in the output of minerals in 1920 were in the production of precious metals. The value of the gold produced in Alaska in 1919 and 1920 was approximately $17,000,000 and $22,000,000, respectively. This figure is an indication of the increase in the output of precious metals. The production of gold during 1920, however, was less than in 1919, chiefly because of the decrease in the value of the gold produced. The value of the mineral production in Alaska in 1919 and 1920, as follows:

1919: $17,000,000
1920: $22,000,000

Despite the increase in the production of minerals, the overall value of the mineral production in Alaska in 1920 was less than in 1919. This is due to the decrease in the value of the gold produced during this period.

In summary, the mineral production in Alaska has shown a significant increase in output from 1919 to 1920, particularly in the production of precious metals. However, the decrease in the value of the gold produced during this period resulted in a decrease in the overall value of the mineral production in Alaska in 1920.
