INSTITUTE COMMITTEE RATIFIES ELECTIONS OF NEW CLASS EXECUTIVES

Juniors Name D. F. Carpenter to Be President—Was Editor-in-Chief of Technique 1922

The results of the elections which were held on Tuesday by the three lower classes, and which have been approved by the Institute Committee, have in many cases upset all previous conjectures, for an office that was to be filled by a vote of the student body is now vacant.

For the Class of 1922, the following officers were elected: President, Donald F. Carpenter; Vice President, George W. T. Lindley; Secretary, Fred L. Hildreth; Treasurer, Walter C. Leckie; and Editor-in-Chief of Technique, Donald F. Carpenter, the last mentioned position having been vacant for some weeks.

The four divisional officers of the Institute Committee are: Donald F. Carpenter, Head of the Class; Henry J. Horn, Jr., President; Thomas H. Hildreth, Secretary; and L. E. King, Editor of the Student News. The Institute Committee is composed of: Donald F. Carpenter, Student President; Henry J. Horn, Jr., President; Thomas H. Hildreth, Secretary; and L. E. King, Editor of the Student News.

Eddy will divide his address are the four challenges to the American student, his body of the Institute next Tuesday, April 22.

Four Challenges

Eddy was with the British and American Forces during the war and after his travels to Canada and Germany, he was engaged in work with the chemical industry. In this country he was engaged in work with the chemical industry.

Eddy will deliver his address at five o'clock in room 10-27.

ds P. McCollin 22

Heads Glee Club

PROPOSE NEW SOCIETY

Heads Glee Club

The management of the track team

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discussed the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.

Dr. Herty discusses the industry at Chemical School

Dr. Charles H. Herty, past president of The American Chemical Society and professor of Chemistry at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, gave the address to the Junior Class Assembly on the subject of "The Future of the Chemical Industry." The talk was given at 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Class Room of the Institute of Technology.