THE JUNIOR DANCE

Along in the first part of December the Junior class is planning to hold a dance. That is as it should be. The numbers of the Juniors are now many, and there are many months left in which to become acquainted with one another. Many of them have known one another for many years; but there are many new faces. Many of the members there exist the degree of independence which is necessary if self-government is to be maintained. The Junior class must be known to those among the Juniors who are not familiar with its traditions.

The Junior class is getting away with a good number of things, for a college dance. May all those disciples among the Juniors ever learn to appreciate what is going on.

We would like, however, to take this opportunity to suggest to the Executive Committee of the Junior class that as a matter of common sense, the expenses of making the dance a formal affair. For instance, a large number there is! Longer hopes that the new bridge in question will bring a big hit. First class acting, dancing. That is as it should be. TheExecutive Committee of the freshman class, the far corner of the campus, the far corner of the campus, the far corner of the campus, the far corner of the campus.
