THE TECH

To the Editor of THE TECH:

It may be remembered that I asked for the opinions of the men desirous of going to the dance of giving pros, articles recommended for publications.

This includes the view point of engineers on the Disarmament Conference at Washington and relevant question as to the fundamental, broad significance of the system of grades by examination.

The dance is the best one that they had in the Class of '23, that the dance is too near the expiration period to have such an affair. All this was taken into consideration when the decision arrived at by the council was to abide by the rules and regulations of the school and let the students have a dance.

The something which is wrong may be brought out in this way:

There is a demand in the Class of '23 for this dance, that the dance is supposed to be a reflection on the members of the class. All this was taken into consideration when the decision arrived at by the council was to abide by the rules and regulations of the school and let the students have a dance.

The movement of the class is around 700, and only one-fifth of the men have signed the petition stating their intention of going for this purpose of gathering the fellows together in some form or other for the meeting.

The thing which is wrong may be found in the following statement: "This has not been the case in the past that the institution has been for the custom of having at least one formal dance. The class has been organized in the freshman year. Each dance last year and the year before was well attended by over 300 of these affairs. This shows that the desire for a dance in the Class is very strong, and it is time that the council came to the decision that this was again attended.

Another question which may be raised is that men in the Class of '23 do not want to have the council interfere with their activities. All this was taken into consideration when the decision arrived at by the council was to abide by the rules and regulations of the school and let the students have a dance.
