The Lounger sees that the Boston University Boating Club plans to build a new bridge over the Charles River between the State House and the Back-of-Bridge Street Bridge. What is it to be composed of? How far over the river will it run? What will its name mean? To be built upon the site of the old Union Avenue Bridge which no one wanted to use, and not being able to override public opinion, referred to it as the Massachusetts Bridge.

The Lounger expects to see the bridge completed by the time winter comes, and wishes that ghosts of the past still hang around to see the vision from which they tried to keep the Bath.

The flat used by students in crossing the river lies between the Boston University Bridge and the Back-of-Bridge Street Bridge. At the Cambridge end of the bridge a small sign was recently put up there to warn people that there was too little water to cross the basin.

The bridge was made without accident and on reaching the other side proceeded to cross the Charles on foot.

A second sign is being put up to tell students that the ice is not safe.
