NEED DORMITORIES HERE

THE construction of new dormitories is a problem which has ever been prominent at Technology. At the present time, the Institute's dormitories house about two hundred men, while about two thousand desire rooms in them.

Their distance from the Institute alone, is an objection to most of the rooms which are to be rented in Cambridge or across the river. Although a walk each morning and evening is not wholly undesirable, there are times when the daily tramp is not pleasant.

Difficulty in getting good rooms is experienced by many men who come to the Institute. Matters of light and heat are not always met in a satisfactory manner by busy landladies, and hot water is frequently a thing only to be dreamed about.

dormitories compulsory for first year men.

Dormitories are invaluable to any educational institution. They furnish added organization of the student body, offering the highly desirable athletic rivalry which brings men actively into the sports, although their athletic ability may not be sufficient to place them on varsity teams.

Dormitories are desirable, true, but the sad part of the matter is that their construction is an object most difficult of attainment. Ever since the new Technology was completed, dormitories have been planned and discussed.

The fact that it will be a Herculean task to raise sufficient money to build dormitories for all students ought not to be a reason for leaving the matter for the future to care for.

SCIENCE TO ARMS!

Although the fight between theology and the teaching profession in Kentucky has temporarily subsided, with the tabling by the legislature of a bill which would literally abolish the teaching of evolution in state schools, the issue can hardly be considered dead even yet.

This deplorable Kentucky wrangle seems to be the result of an anti-science movement which has been growing of late in some sections of the country. Prompted by sect prejudice, it is aimed at the very basis of all scientific development.

William Jennings Bryan, professional condemner of everything, has given the anti-science movement occasional boosts. It was a speech of Mr. Bryan's, in fact, which first brought forth this senseless outburst in Kentucky against the teaching of evolution.

Perhaps the scientists themselves could help matters very materially in the long run. So far, they seem to have been rather lax and too little impressed with the seriousness of the situation.

The time has now come when all good people can see a sketch of the elusive Lounger. He presents himself below. In other words, the gentleman with the beaming countenance, with rays of wisdom radiating from his brain center and holding in his left paw a piece of paper, is the much desired and long looked for gentleman.

Why does he look so happy and what does he carry in his hand? Ah, that, dear reader, is what he is now pounding vigorously on the keys of his finger-bruising Oliver to tell you.

DANCE FURNITURE

The furniture used at the Junior Dance that was not returned Saturday will be returned today.

All furniture that could not be identified, was left at the Union to be picked out and signed for by the owners. Juniors may look over this unidentified furniture by seeing Tom Hines of the Union.

After the Lounger had laughed at this for some time he decided to go out and see the fun at the Union when the stude came around to claim such of the wreckage as they could identify.

He accordingly put on his crimson tie, which he was sure would get him past the guards. About an hour before noon he presented himself at the establishment with the air of one who has just risen from deep slumber.

As he looked over the gruesome scene he heard several excited voices outside the door. He listened in and offered by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston for the best answer to Mr. Edison's question, "Who Was John Hancock?" has been awarded to Leon V. Quigley, a student at the Worcester (Mass.) Polytechnic Institute.

"Who Was John Hancock?"

JOHN HANCOCK was an American statesman and patriot. His signature is found on the oldest and most important documents of Massachusetts, and of the United States. He was the first signer of the Declaration of Independence and was the first Governor of Massachusetts.

John Hancock was born at Quincy, Massachusetts, in 1737. He graduated from Harvard College, and entering upon his uncle's business became a successful merchant in Boston. He gained much in social power and in wealth, being meanwhile justly popular for his integrity and ability.

He was in 1765-1770 a selectman of Boston and a member of the general court. With Samuel Adams he led the Massachusetts Whigs, and only escaped capture at Lexington and Concord by virtue of the valiant fight by the Minute Men on the "Nineteenth of April in '75."

John Hancock was subsequently known in various positions: as President of the Continental Congress, as Major-General of the Massachusetts military forces, as President of the Constitutional Convention. He died at Quincy, Massachusetts, October eighth, 1793.

The historical position of John Hancock is unique in State and Nation. He wielded great political influence but was always liberal and public-spirited. His name is most prominent as a Whig leader during the American Revolution in such events as the Boston Massacre, the Boston Tea Party and the battles of Lexington and Concord.

John Hancock signed his name first to the Declaration of Independence. He thus risked his own "life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness" that these privileges might be obtained for others to enjoy. To this end he "pledged his life, his fortune, and his sacred honor."

That he was popular and efficient may be judged from the fact that he was for ten years Governor of Massachusetts, being elected annually to this office by popular vote.

John Hancock insured the life of the Nation— We will insure your life with the same integrity
