STUDENT TOURS

THE average American has often been criticised for his scanty knowledge of European countries, for his apparent ignorance of habits and customs of European people, and for his hazy ideas of celebrated places of interest, of buildings, and of scenic beauties in countries across the Atlantic which have been so extolled in song and story. Many people have often wished to visit the interesting places of Europe but have been deterred by the overwhelming expense, or by their own lack of knowledge of how to get about in foreign countries.

This summer an opportunity for traveling in Europe under competent guidance and at moderate expense has been made possible for students. A number of so-called student tours have been planned to include Great Britain, France, Italy, and the Scandinavian countries. Such places as the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, famous Stratford-on-Avon, and Kenilworth in Great Britain; the Riviera, Pompeii, Rome, and Milan in Italy; fjords and mountain passes in Norway; Paris, Bordeaux, and the battlefields in France, will be visited; great cities as well as small will be included in the itinerary. In many cases the students will be accorded special courtesies by the various governments and universities.

The effect of such tours is obvious. A student's outlook upon world affairs will be greatly enlarged, his intellect will be broadened, and his previous ideas, usually biased by racial antipathies, modified. It is hoped that these changes in the American youth will tend to result in a better understanding between Americans and Europeans in the future. The plan is excellent. Let us hope that the results sought after will be accomplished.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of THE TECH:

An article in the last issue of The Technology Review entitled, "Radio Society Makes Best Transatlantic Tests" has been called to my attention. A similar article appeared in THE TECH. On behalf of the Radio Society, I wish to express the sincerest regret that such erroneous and misleading statements should have been published.

The Technology radio station (IXM) was heard on two successive nights by Paul F. Godley at Ardrossan, Scotland. The most successful station, however, was undoubtedly IBCG at Greenwich, Conn. Mr. Godley was an American, with American receiving equipment, sent over by the American Radio Relay League.

The disparaging comparison with the Harvard radio station is especially to be regretted. As a matter of fact this station was not in actual operating condition until after Mr. Godley had completed his tests.

We are at a loss as to the origin of these statements and wish to declare most emphatically that the Radio Society was not aware that such an item was to be published.

Very Truly Yours,
Fullerton D. Webster,
President M. I. T. Radio Society.

Bezdek Lauds Athletics

College athletics are not as bad as is popularly supposed, according to Hugo Bezdek, Penn State coach. The objectionable features have been given too much publicity, while in reality college sports are of great value in creating the proper college spirit, a fact which is often lost sight of in the tirades against an occasional case of professionalism.

The coach should be at the college all year round, so as to keep in line with the student spirit, and really become a part of the institution. The coach whose only objective is to turn out a winning team should be abolished.

Professor Lectured for Kissing Co-Ed

"For a college lecturer to kiss a fair co-ed, even at a students dance, reveals a character incompatible with the due performance of his duty." Such was the reprimand imposed by the court on the unfortunate professor who had the presumption to contest his dismissal from University College for the above offense.

A tabernacle, modeled after revival tabernacles, as a temporary auditorium is under consideration by the trustees of Ohio State University. The present auditorium is not large enough to hold even the men of the freshman class, and the building program does not include an auditorium for some years.

Daily wireless service is given by the department of physics of the University of Wisconsin for the benefit of farmers and amateur radio operators. It includes market reports, weather forecasts, special lectures, musical concerts, and reports of athletic events.

From university professor to national president is a popular sport these days since our ex-president set the example. Of the three republics now occupying the territory of the former Austro-Hungarian empire, two have university professors as presidents.

Two literary societies, organized in 1835 at Wake Forest College, North Carolina, are yet active. They have a joint sinking fund and are considering the erection of a literary society building.

Courses in journalism are now taught in 175 American colleges and universities.

CONTEMPORARY COLLEGIATE COMMENT

WHAT MAKES UNIVERSITY SPIRIT?

From the Colorado Silver and Gold
When we were boys and girls in high school we heard much about "school spirit." Our teachers asked us to write themes on the subject and we defined it as everything from crowd contagion at an athletic contest to the faithful pursuit of the high ideals of scholarship which we were supposed to have. Now that we are men and women in a university, the question can still be asked, and the answer is still as hard to find.

School spirit in high school is conceived to apply only to those activities in which the entire student body takes a part, and therein it makes the greatest distinction between the same name in the university. Every act of every group and every individual is expected to be guided by this vague vision called school spirit. In high school we liked to think that our own little organizations were the big thing and that the school only needed to be considered on week-ends when we went forth to cheer the football team on, or when we were asked to support the school annual. In the university we like to think, whether we practice our belief or not, that school spirit is working all the time, in each act that relates to the campus.

We cannot define university spirit, try as we may. To some it may preclude the sort of courage which makes our athletes struggle on even unto exhaustion for a mere ribbon or two in the name of their institution. It may mean to others the indomitable strength of will which makes us refuse to quit any project until it is successfully completed. But to all it means at least the heart of the school, the guiding hand which makes us continue when we would hesitate, and makes us work when we would shirk. It is thinking of the school when we plan something which requires the labor of but a few, for we know that there is a something which can be called school spirit.

Many of us have much to learn if our school spirit is to be developed to a higher plane. We mean here that there is a prevailing epidemic of personalism, in which students do and think for themselves only, and never cogitate about the effect on the school. We have many organizations on the campus which are apparently drifting from the path of school spirit. They forget that their ultimate purpose is to add strength to the body politic, which we mean when we say "school." These groups seem to be taking their course in a different channel than that prescribed by the doctrines of school spirit. We had best beware unless we lose that thing we love to call "Colorado spirit" in the press of our specialized desires. We must never forget the deeper ideal, and we must not lose sight of that golden end—the true school spirit.

CATHOLIC CLUB HEARS PROMINENT BOSTONIAN

The Technology Catholic Club held a well attended meeting Wednesday evening at a dinner given in North hall, the chief speaker of the evening being Hon. E. Mark Sullivan, corporation counsel of the city of Boston, and one of the leaders of his profession in this city. Mr. Sullivan spoke in an interesting manner of the problems of the present day business man and engineer, his words showing the result of a fruitful experience in the commercial world. Mr. Sullivan also entertained the club with several well-received selections on the piano. Plans for the Lenten Communion Breakfast and for the third term social activities of the club were outlined by President Salloway, and the usual words of greeting and advice were given by Father O'Connor.
