OPEN HOUSE

THE EXPERIMENT which was tried, indeed, was a case in which the building officials for inspection, drew a large number of persons, who were evidently quite interested in the Institute and its material concerns. The idea was carried out on a small scale, being arranged primarily for the friends and relatives of the students. The result of the trial, however, seems to indicate that it is worth while to have a general open house day at Technology. Many people from Boston and vicinity would be welcome.
